

PodCAST Four Minute Friday Study Spots

Kara Snyder

Hello and welcome to a special edition of the Podcast, the podcast produced by the College of Applied Science and Technology. I'm your host, Kara Snyder, and I serve as the assistant dean of marketing communications and constituent relations for the College. Our four minute Friday episodes are quick chats about what's up on campus, helping you to make the most of your time as a red bird. As we settle in to the middle of the semester, you might be looking to refresh your study routine. Midterms are coming up, and you might want to get out of your residence hall or your apartment and study in a place that's new to you. Here are some spots around campus that you may not have discovered yet, the cast connection space on the first floor of Turner Hall has lots of seating options and three walls of windows providing tons of natural light. McCormick Hall has tables on the first floor and some soft seating on the second floor. There are also some tables on the bridge walkway to the Student Fitness Center. Old union has two handy study spaces. 116 is a student lounge with two collaboration spaces and open seating as well. 140 is an open computer lab for student use Schrader. 230 is a student lounge for majors, housed in trader Hall, which includes criminal justice sciences. I feel like this space is a little bit of a hidden gem when it comes to study spaces. It has a print station, several workspaces and a lounge type area, along with a refrigerator and a microwave. Milner library is obviously filled with places to study, but in my opinion, the best spot is the southwest corner of the fourth floor, where the windows provide a great view of the bridge to the quad. This probably isn't a secret, but both Starbucks locations on campus, in the Bone Student Center and in the Student Fitness Center have lots of seating options. And who doesn't study better with the smell of coffee in the air? Speaking of the bone, don't forget the fireplaces on the first and the second floors. Those provide a cozy spot to study, especially during the winter months. What's your favorite spot on campus to study? Hop over to our socials at ISU Sci Tech and tell us thanks for tuning in to this episode of four minute Fridays. If you have an idea of something that we should chat about on these short episodes, contact information is in the show notes.
